Determination of methanol in pharmaceutical and biotechnology processes: IUPAC recommendations and practice. Methanol is a reagent of many pharmaceutical and biotechnology processes. It is a highly toxic product and its inhalation could lead to a fatality. This IUPAC technical report gives guidelines on the determination of methanol in the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries. The IUPAC Recommendations define the toxicity and the technical definition of methanol. The IUPAC Recommendations on the toxicity of methanol emphasize the absence of a threshold limit value for methanol. A few methods for the determination of methanol in the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries have been validated and are approved for use. We proposed to replace the alcohol oxidase (AOD) method for the determination of methanol in biological matrices and in the pharmaceutical industry with a bioanalytical procedure that uses the activity of methanol dehydrogenase (MDH) in yeasts.using System; using System.Collections.Generic; using System.ComponentModel; using System.Data; using System.Drawing; using System.Linq; using System.Text; using System.Windows.Forms; namespace FilterTextBoxRows { public partial class Form1 : Form { public Form1() { InitializeComponent(); } private void Form1_Load(object sender, EventArgs e 82157476af
